

Assignment 1: Interactive Terminal Project

Role-playing Scenarios - Text Adventures

Idea 1: You are coming home from work but you accidentally take a wrong turn. You are now lost in the dark. All you can see is the little bit of road in front of you. You must pick the right direction everytime you meet a fork in the road, or else you might end up somewhere you definitely do not want to be...

Idea 2: Your Math teacher is making the whole class do a pop quiz. You are given 15 questions. If you get lower than an 80% on the test you will fail the entire course. You must get at least an 80% or higher.

Idea 3: You and your friend went to go play hide and seek in the forest. Your friend hides first. As you begin to go find him you stumble across a cave. You think nothing of it but then you hear your friend screaming for help. You must go navigate through the cave to help your friend.

Idea 4: You just bought a whole bunch of Pokemon cards but you have to split them to share with your sibling. There will be 2 decks of cards all faced down. You get to pick first each time either from the 1st deck, or the second deck. After you pick the card you picked is told and the other one sibling got is told. You must try to pick the good cards from the deck based on luck.

Idea 5: You meet someone that you really like. Your goal is to choose the right things to say to them to try to win the person over. Similar to a dating simulator!

Game Idea Pitch:

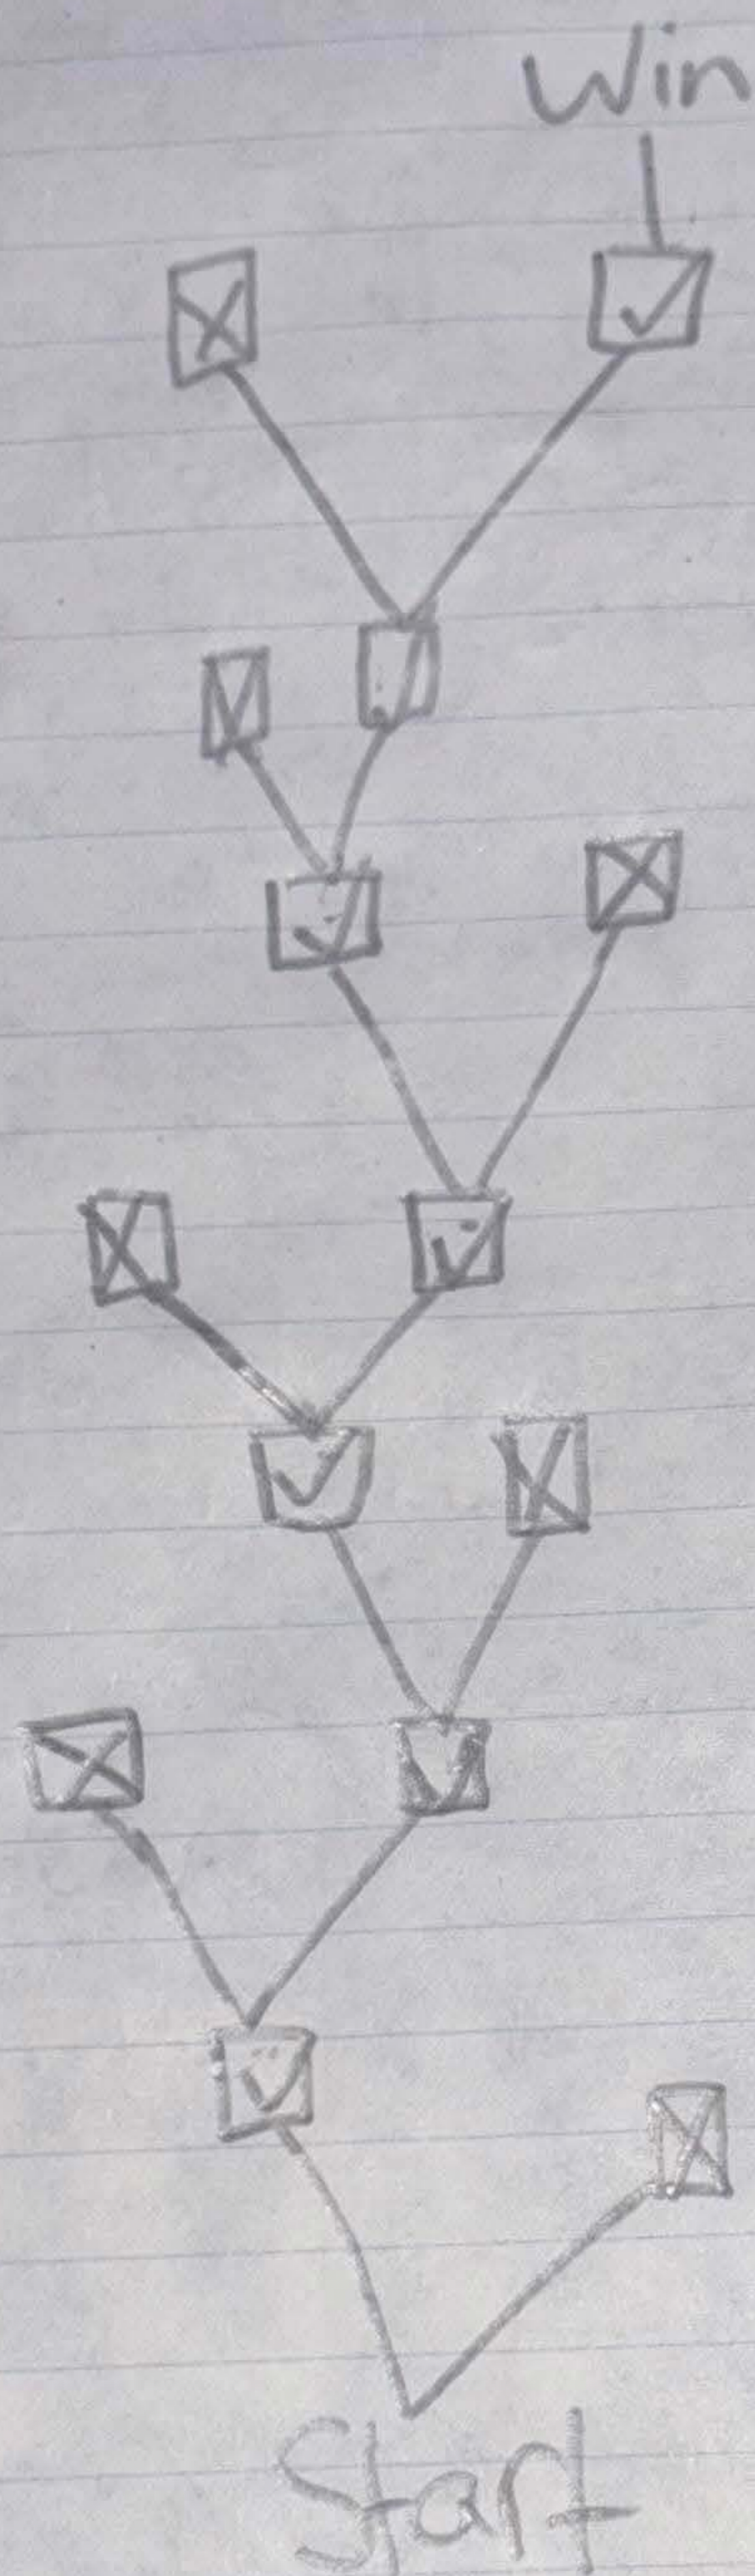

You just got off a long shift from work, but when you are driving home you accidentally take a wrong turn because of how dark it is outside. You must try to find the right way home taking the proper paths to get there or else!!

→ The plan for this interactive game is to have a couple of if statements asking you which direction you would like to go, as well as maybe a couple of little additions such as hitchhikers etc.

Straight?
Right?

This game plans to have 7 different questions you must choose correctly.

Lost in the Dark - Flow Chart

